Editor BANNER: After an absence of about four months I again ask space in your sheet,

The BANNER comes regularly to hand and tells me of election, prohibition etc etc, I also notice with pride the work of our District School. The last election in New Zealand was also fought on a prohibition platform but the people decided for high license.

Our missionary work in the Waikato district is progressing nicely. The report for 1897 shows 50 additions by baptisms and births. On the 8th and 9th of Jan. we held our semi annual district conference at Waingaro, about 175 Maories were in attendance, about 69 per cent of whom are saints. Pres. Ezra T. Richards of the N. Z. mission was in attendance, also Elders, Horace Hollingworth, P. A. Waters, A. E. Asper and David A. Hahn, the latter just from home. Elder Hahn is from West Jordan and is acquainted with my uncle Geo. Kirkham and my cousin G. E. Kirkham. It was indeed a pleasure to meet a friend who had once the dust of Lehi on his feet.

Our conference was a thorough success and we feel it will prove a benefit to our people. Yesterday we reinstalled 7 back sliding members into the church. My monthly report for Dec. shows 50 meetings held and as many times preached, held 40 gospel conversations besides 24 other religious services, traveled 498 miles horseback visiting 41 Maori villages. Part of the month I traveled alone and part with my companion, Elder Hollingworth.

This summer has been very hot and dry, and crops will necessarily suffer. I had new potatoes for Christmas. From 174 lbs avoirdupois last summer I now weigh 167 and feel excellent in health and spirits.

In this connection allow me to extend my deep felt sympathy to the wife, parents, family and friends of our beloved brother Lewis J. Bushman. Few indeed of the sons of God are worthy of such a death. Elder Bushman was one and his name is written among those who have sacrificed their lives in the work of God. May we, his younger brethren emulate the life he lead.

Ever praying for the welfare of Israel I remain your brother in the gospel of Christ.

Francis W. Kirkham.

A Tribute from a Visitor.

It has been my good fortune to have personal acquaintance with many of the prominent men of our country, beginning with the grandest of all—the lamented Lincoln—down to those of today.

I have listened spell-bound to the healing, soothing phrases of Lincoln, and in rapt sympathy to the impassioned words of Garrison, Phillips, Fred Douglas and the great host of brilliant, honest men who with them raised their voices in behalf of the black man, and who in their pleading cast their eyes heavenward, and asked the Father of all that slavery might end, that all men might be free.

As the memory of those men and days came back to me, I think of their fervid utterances in behalf of men, and I glory in their wondrous deeds, and feel that the world is immeasurably better that they have lived.

Sometimes it seems to me that these men and voices were divinely added to those upon the earth, to lead all others, and work out together in God's own way the end of human slavery, for the whole world concedes that they were the embodiment of sincerity and honesty, and that their daily life was irreproachable—they accomplish God's work and the world bows down in fond remembrance.

As I sat this afternoon and listened to the candid and sometimes eloquent words of the venerable President of the Mormon Church, I became satisfied (however much I might be at variance with him in religious views) that before me stood a grand character—an honest man. No rational human being could look at and hear him, and from their inmost hearts say otherwise. May his days, and the days of all such men as he, be lengthened to the longest span, for the world is better that they live.

When he and such as he pass out from this vale of tears, and wend their way to the feet of Him they love so well, may their fondest hopes be realized—for such as they upon this earth are few indeed. In all sincerity I voice this wish, and give it wing, that it may fly to them, and in their sad and troubled hours be a source of consolation and of joy to them while living, for to the pulseless clod of clay, flowers upon the coffin exhale no fragrance, and kindly words are meaningless.
